

vivid color of nature

vividcolorofnature

■ introducing by Simone Leo
text and photos by Nasr Marei

One more time, Nasr Marei shares with us some of his photographic skills. In previous issues of the Desert Heritage, Tutto Arabi and others he presented us with outstanding photos from Egypt and many other places in a series of articles.

His technique is simple and straight forward and yet resulting in some stupendous photos. His keen eye is always searching for subjects. Nature, landscape, animals and underwater are his favored subjects.

duck and swans

Nature is extremely rich and there is so much that yet one remains to explore. The combinations of colors, texture, light and formations offers an unlimited resources to a person who wants to capture this on canvas, through his/her lens or simply to register that beauty in his mind and enriches his thoughts with beauty.

skyandclouds

As a keen photographer, I always have my eyes open and in continuous search for interesting things to capture. Almost every time when exploring a new frontier I see things as if I am looking at it from my viewfinder. Actually, I visualize framing and lighting while looking around.

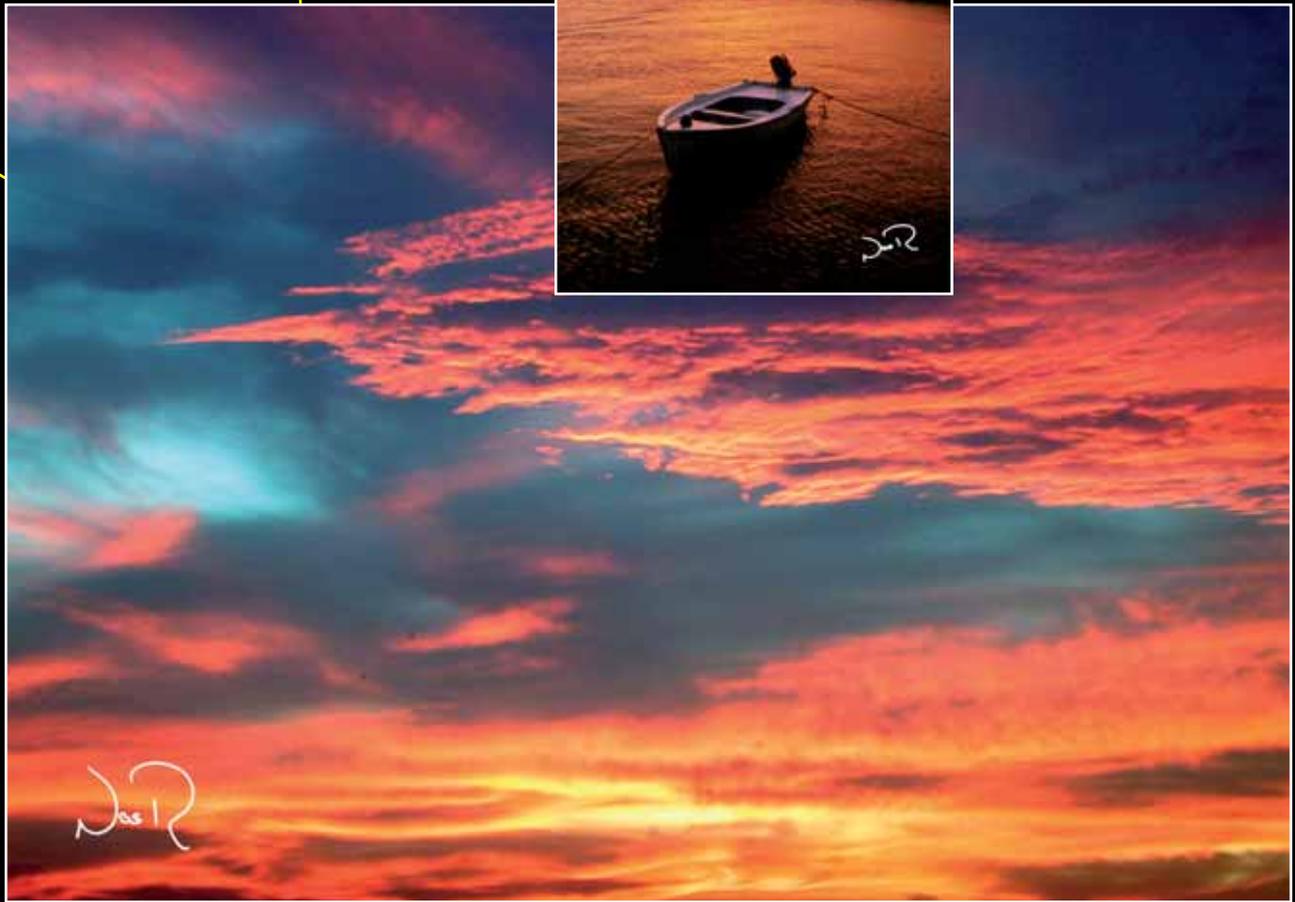

Photography is a wonderful tool to bring back home Nature's beauty and memories. You keep them forever there and look on them once in a while to relive these special moments .

underwater

sunset

Here ,m very dear friends at Desert Heritage asked me to submit some photos for a new article. After some consideration , I thought that the theme should be the Colors of Nature. Whether , it is flowers, foliage , animals , birds , marine life or simply sky. It is a celebration to the gift of nature.

flowerandfoliage

Next time you drive , walk or travel take some time to look on the details around you. Our busy and hectic life has blinded us from enjoying the beauty around us. Take your time , examine , scan , remember and study what you see.
Your experience will be enriched and you will enjoy your day and life much more.

wildcolors

If you have a camera in your hand take some of that beauty back home where you can enjoy it every day .

