Professional American artist living between Normandy, France and Atlanta, Ga, Brooke Major practices a unique painting style mixing sculpture and painting and creates bas relief images using titanium white oil paint. In these pages you can see some of her amazing paintings.

While attending university in Paris, Brooke found time to audit classes in the Fine Arts School in Paris to perfect her skills in drawing and painting. Passionate about horses since she was 3yo, Brooke has been practicing the discipline of showjumping in competition since childhood and the breeding of showjumping horses for over 20 years. This led Brooke to leave the city life in Paris once graduated from university, the desire for horse breeding led her to live in Normandy near the famous DDAY beaches. Her love of horses, and especially the breeding aspects have allowed an artistic perfection of the animal. Brooke passionately depicts the horse in all of its splendour by using them as subjects for her paintings. The equestrian subjects have proven to be judge's choice award winners in art shows and contests and have led to many prizes and shows. Disciplines often used in her work are disciplines the artist has practiced and include broodmares, hunters, western, dressage, showjumping and polo. She has been asked on many occasions to create portraits of horses either through customers orders of their horses, as well as studying her own horses at all stages of growth and development. Other information is available on her website page: <http://www.brooke-major.com> where you can learn more about the artist and become familiar with all of the aspects of her universe.
